IdeaNest's link to reportedly suspended AppVance Inc.

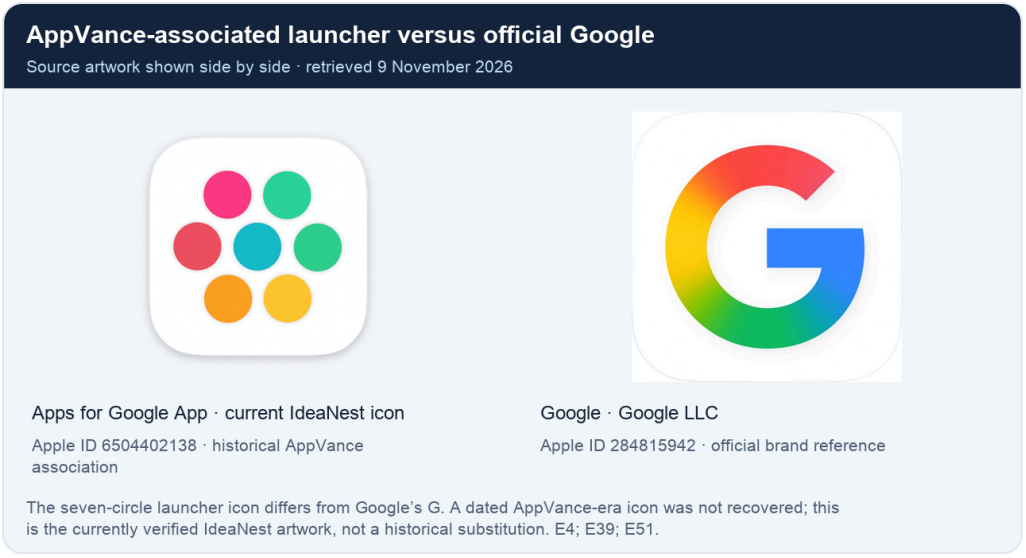

Wyoming filings connect Innovatech Solutions LLC and IdeaNest INC through the same filing-service email and closely timed registered-agent changes. IdeaNest's Apps for Google App connects to AppVance Inc through its embedded support email, shared legacy policy URLs and an older vendor record. The documented chain is shared administration plus product history; common ownership remains unproven.

VISUAL EVIDENCE

The older icon looked much closer to Chrome.

The same Apple app ID used at least two earlier icon designs referenced by dated Apple captures. On 3 August 2026, the artwork used red, green and yellow curved segments around a blue centre, closely recalling Chrome's composition. The 10 August capture references a multicolour rounded-diamond variant. The four-square icon observed now does not represent that earlier presentation. These are visual-confusion assessments; the archived dates are not exact change timestamps. Official Chrome and Safari mobile-app artwork below is used only as a brand reference.

The connection extends beyond a shared address

Both 2026 annual reports give info@acompanyinus.com and are signed on consecutive days. Both agent-change packets are dated 19 April 2026, stamped received 27 April and filed on 15 May at 4:24 PM and 4:36 PM. They name the same old and new registered agents and the same agent-side filer. Together, this raises a credible concern about coordinated administration and potentially common control. Different named signatories do not exclude that possibility; the records do not yet identify a common controlling person.

Recovered older icons: Chrome-like branding before the current four-square design

The 3 August 2026 Apple archive identifies app 6748339444 as Open App for Chrome & Firefox, sold by Innovatech Solutions LLC. Its og:image metadata and app artwork references point to an Apple-hosted icon with three curved red, green and yellow segments surrounding a blue triangular centre. The same date's exact replay provides the link; the associated original Apple CDN asset was retrieved on 7 November 2026. This is a dated app-specific artwork association, not an unrelated image found by name.

Compared with Google's official Chrome mark, the older icon repeats the three outer colour regions around a blue core and a broadly rotating circular arrangement. The pieces, glossy rendering, gaps and triangular centre differ from Chrome's flat circular emblem. In combination with Chrome in the app name and explicit wrong-product buyer reports, that close visual language strengthens the misleading-presentation concern. It is an editorial assessment of confusion risk, not a court ruling or a claim of pixel-identical copying.

By the 10 August 2026 archived page, the title is Open App for Chrome & Safari and the image reference changes to a red/green/yellow rounded diamond around a blue triangular inset. The listing inspected on7November uses four separate coloured squares. These three observations establish distinct artwork associated with the same numeric Apple app ID. They bracket observed designs; they do not reveal the exact change dates, every intermediate icon or the original August 2025 launch icon.

The current four-square icon does not capture the app's earlier branding. The recovered artwork is shown beside Chrome and the current icon, while the separately extracted Chrome logos bundled in the app remain documented in the binary-resource section. A supplied build's resources do not themselves establish which icon appeared in a past App Store listing.

What the investigation found

IdeaNest's Apps for Google App retains a direct support and product-history connection to AppVance Inc, whose account the reporter says was suspended around September 2026. The supplied IdeaNest build still contains AppVance's support email and legacy policy links; an exact-bundle historical catalog also names AppVance as vendor. Apple archives already name IdeaNest in November 2025, so the evidence does not establish a move after the reported suspension. Archived Apple artwork references also reveal earlier Chrome-like icons for Open App. The investigation documents Google-brand marketing and buyer confusion, plus shared corporate-administration contacts between IdeaNest and Innovatech Solutions LLC. Open App for Chrome & Safari has explicit buyer reports of paying under the mistaken belief that it was Google Chrome. These are substantive publisher-continuity and misleading-presentation concerns; the controlling individual and Apple's enforcement reason remain unverified.

IdeaNest → AppVance: an embedded contact, linked policies and an older vendor record

The main kj.gapps executable contains customercare@appvance.org alongside its feedback-related text. AppVance's own website publishes that contact domain and identifies the business as AppVance Inc. Apple's indexed App for Gmail listing (6773641239) also identifies AppVance Inc and that exact email. Apple's developer page identifies AppVance Inc as developer 1775331516. This is a specific contact association to another publisher identity, beyond shared hosting or a service address.

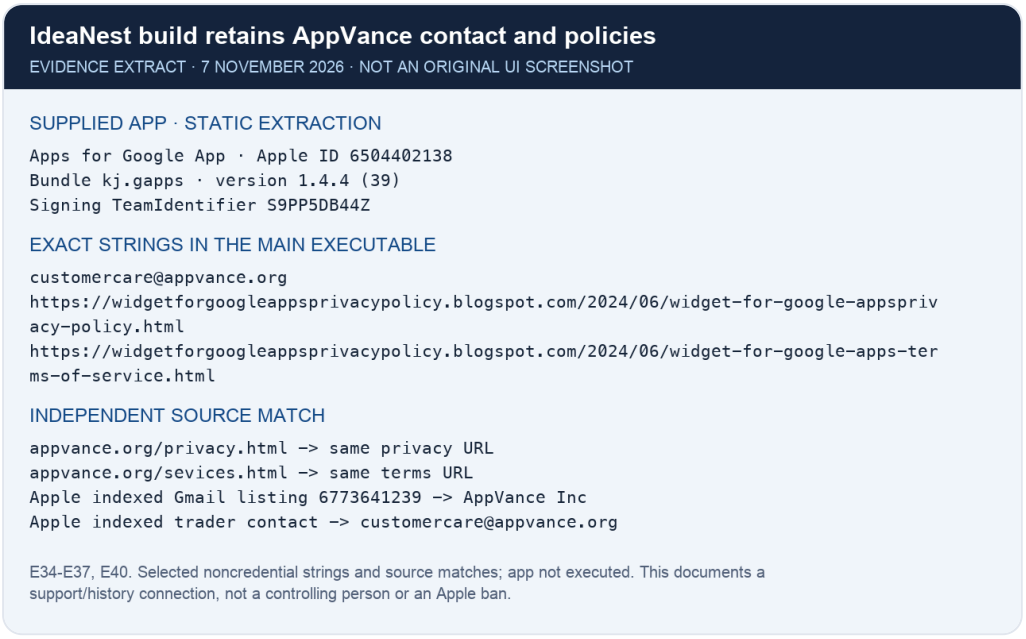

AppVance's live privacy and terms pages both link, through their 21 June 2024 date labels, to widgetforgoogleappsprivacypolicy.blogspot.com. The same Blogspot privacy and terms URLs are hardcoded in the supplied IdeaNest executable, while the current App Store description points to IdeaNest's domain. The executable therefore retains an older legal/support path that differs from the current store-facing identity.

The Blogspot privacy page dated 21 June 2024 names Krista Johnson as the releaser of Widget for Google Apps and supplies a Gmail support contact. That name is a statement on the policy page, not a verified real-world identity or a proven former Apple account holder. The same blog includes AI Chat policies, and its public Blogger profile, spire, lists that blog plus Google Drive/Documents and printer-support blogs. This establishes common blog administration, not ownership of every similarly named app or a link to a specific unverified app ID.

A separate indexed/cached MacUpdater record for the exact bundle kj.gapps lists AppVance Inc as vendor for version 1.4.1 (29), with release date 18 September 2025, and links to the same Apple app ID 6504402138. The supplied current build is 1.4.4 (39) and the current Apple listing names IdeaNest INC. This secondary historical record supports a prior AppVance association; it does not provide an Apple transfer record or prove why the seller identity changed.

These matching contacts and legal URLs document an IdeaNest-AppVance support/history connection. The reporter describes AppVance as suspended and estimates the event around September 2026, based on observing disappearance rather than an Apple notice. The current empty Mac catalog is consistent with withdrawn availability, but does not establish the termination reason, a common controlling person or an Innovatech-AppVance link. A product transfer, retained legacy support code or shared development remain possible explanations.

On 7 November 2026, App for Gmail 6773641239 and AI Bot 6736975220 returned HTTP 404 and zero exact-ID lookup results in US, DE and IE. The AppVance developer identity still resolves, but exact developer lookups return no Mac titles in those three storefronts. Indexed Apple listing content is historical evidence, not proof of current availability. The November 2025 IdeaNest archive predates the reporter's estimated suspension; no after-suspension move is established.

AppVance's recovered portfolio: Google-facing products and unresolved leads

Two Google-facing products can be linked to AppVance with specific product identifiers. Apps for Google App 6504402138 is now under IdeaNest; the exact-bundle MacUpdater history names AppVance, and the supplied build retains AppVance's email. App for Gmail ℠ 6773641239 is named under AppVance in Apple's indexed listing, including the same support contact and D-U-N-S number 119363756. The Gmail product is currently unavailable in the three checked storefronts.

The launcher's Google-oriented title, recognizable Google product marks in its promotion and compiled resources, and customer complaints create the strongest misleading-presentation concern. Apple's Japan page contains a one-star review dated 22 February 2025 accusing the name of impersonating Google. Other visible buyers allege unexpected payment or interference with Chrome. These are customer allegations; no test established that the launcher actually blocked Chrome. Existing positive reviews and the third-party disclaimer remain part of the record.

The Gmail app's cached Apple page uses the subtitle Best way to access Gmail and describes an independent email client with an express Google-affiliation disclaimer. Its catalog-sourced Apple CDN icon has now been recovered and is compared below with Google LLC's official Gmail artwork. The multicolour M resemblance adds a visual concern to the Gmail-oriented name and subtitle. Compatibility references and visual similarity do not by themselves establish the developer's licence permissions or an adjudicated trademark violation.

The shared Blogger profile also administers a support blog whose policy names Documents for Google Docs. This is an additional Google-product lead, not an established fourth AppVance app: no exact Apple ID or developer-account bridge was recovered. A printer-support blog is listed but has no identified product. The AI chatbot association below is from a secondary catalog and is not a Google-infringement finding.

Icon sources and Google branding inside the launcher

The recovered App for Gmail ℠ icon is linked by AppAgg's cached catalog to the AppVance product and matches the title and publisher in Apple's indexed listing for 6773641239. The actual image was retrieved from Apple's CDN, rather than recreated. Its multicolour M uses a red left upright, a green-to-blue right upright and a warm pink/red-to-yellow diagonal form, closely recalling Gmail's M identity. The geometry and rendering differ. Alongside the Gmail-led name and subtitle, this supports a concern about mistaken supplier identity, rather than a claim of pixel-identical artwork or a proven licence violation.

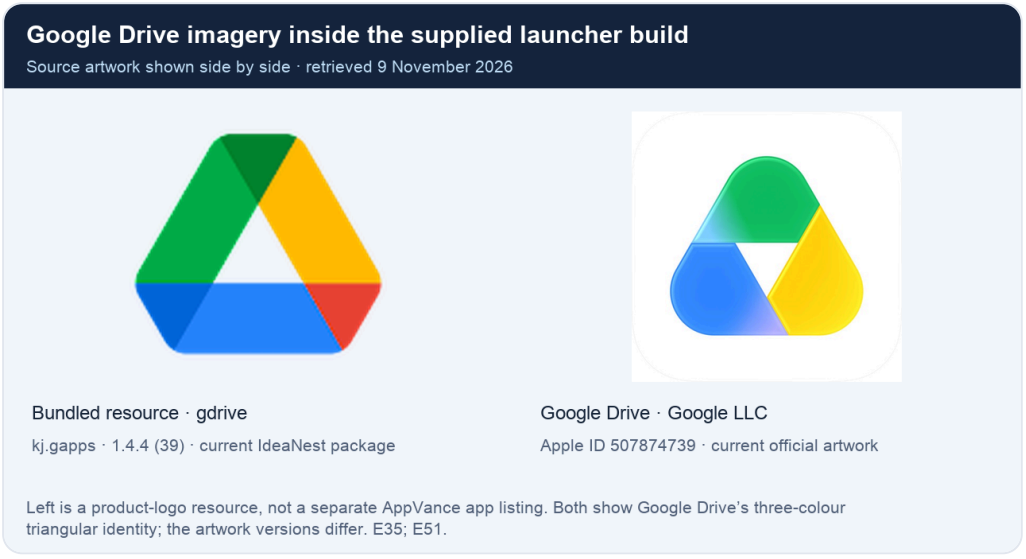

The Google launcher comparison uses the verified current icon for app 6504402138, now published by IdeaNest. Its AppVance association comes from the exact-bundle vendor history and the retained support/legal references, not from the icon itself. The seven-circle flower-like design is different from Google's G mark. A dated AppVance-era icon for this launcher was not recovered, so the report does not present the current image as a verified historical AppVance icon.

The additional comparisons show Google Docs and Drive product-logo resources extracted from the supplied kj.gapps package against current Google LLC artwork. These are recognisable Google product marks within the launcher's resources, rather than separate AppVance app icons or proof of additional developer accounts. Different artwork generations have different flat, gradient and dimensional treatments. These figures document branding used in the product; they do not determine the developer's licence permissions.

Official references were obtained from Apple exact-ID records naming Google LLC on 9 November 2026: Gmail 422689480, Google 284815942, Google Docs 842842640 and Google Drive 507874739. The reference images are official mobile-app artwork used for brand comparison; they do not imply that Google offers the investigated Mac utilities. The support-blog lead Documents for Google Docs still has no verified Apple app ID, so no guessed icon is attributed to it.

Reported suspension and an earlier publisher change: the dates matter

The reporter says AppVance's account was suspended approximately two months before 7 November 2026, placing the estimate around September 2026. The stated basis is observation of apps/account disappearing. No Apple suspension notice, termination date or reason was supplied. This report records that allegation explicitly rather than converting product unavailability into a confirmed fraud sanction.

The Apple listing archived at 01:53:32 UTC on 16 November 2025 already names IdeaNest INC and developer ID 1840069799 for app 6504402138. The exact Wayback replay URL was rechecked, with a matching Memento-Datetime header. Thus IdeaNest's documented association predates the estimated September 2026 suspension by roughly ten months. A secondary vendor record associates the earlier September 2025 version with AppVance, but does not independently date a transfer.

The supported story is that a Google-focused product has a documented AppVance history and survives under IdeaNest while other AppVance products are now unavailable. That continuity warrants scrutiny of account relationships, retained support arrangements and how a publisher change affects consumer accountability. The evidence does not show that a banned developer created IdeaNest after suspension, identify a nominee account holder or establish intentional enforcement evasion.

Who is behind AppVance? A corporate candidate, not an identified controller

Apple's indexed EU trader disclosure identifies AppVance Inc, D-U-N-S119363756, at 8 The Grn, Ste A, Dover, Delaware19901-3618. The reporter supplied a transcription of a Delaware result for APPVANCE INC, file5143470, with formation date18September2024 and Northwest Registered Agent Service, Inc. at 8 The Green, Ste B, Dover. This is a qualified corporate lead: the company name and street/city agree, but the suites differ, and no document yet bridges the Delaware file number to Apple's D-U-N-S record.

A registered agent receives legal process; its name, address and telephone do not identify the app developer's owner. The supplied free-search fields do not name a director, officer or shareholder. No verified AppVance controlling individual was recovered. In particular, the policy name Krista Johnson and the Blogger display name spire are public website assertions, not verified personal identities. Neither is linked to the named Innovatech or IdeaNest filing signatories by an official corporate record.

Delaware's public annual-report fields include directors and a signing officer under8Del.C.§502(a)(5). Formation documents, amendments, filing history and public portions of annual reports are the concrete next records to request after confirming the file number. A private request draft has been prepared; no order, fee or message was submitted. Such records may identify officers or directors without resolving beneficial ownership.

Searches also surface an established software-testing business using Appvance/Appvance.ai. Its executives and business history are not attributed to this App Store publisher: no unique identifier was found connecting that business to appvance.org, Apple developer1775331516 or D-U-N-S119363756.

AppVance infrastructure: a support link to IdeaNest, no unique Innovatech match

Authoritative .org registry RDAP dates appvance.org to23September2024 and identifies Cloudflare as registrar. Its registrant is not disclosed. AppVance and IdeaNest both use Zoho mail routing, while Innovatech uses Cloudflare Email Routing; the domains use different Cloudflare nameserver pairs and distinct domain-verification values. No matching custom analytics identifier or verification token was found.

The resource comparison found Cloudflare's standard email-decoding helper on all three sites and an identical OwlCarousel1.3.3 stylesheet on AppVance and Innovatech. These are widely distributed third-party components, not distinctive shared publisher code. No common custom asset or attributable pre-Cloudflare origin host connects AppVance to Innovatech in the examined material. The exact binary email and legal-URL matches remain the much stronger IdeaNest-AppVance evidence.

Chrome is free. This is a separately sold utility.

The main subject is Open App for Chrome & Safari, app 6748339444, bundle com.innovatech.tabs. Apple lists Innovatech Solutions LLC as seller. The subtitle is Tab Switch for All Browser. The description promises management of already-open Chrome and Safari tabs, per-browser grouping, search and menu-bar control. It does not establish that this download installs Google Chrome.

A standalone Mac app can legitimately help control browsers without being a Chrome extension. Therefore the fact that this is an app rather than an extension is not evidence of fraud. The consumer warning is more specific: the brand-led title and promotions attract browser-seeking users, and actual reviewers describe paying under the wrong product identity.

Google's Mac installation instructions direct users to its free googlechrome.dmg download. Safari is provided and updated as an Apple browser. Paying this seller does not buy either official browser. The reviewed app was not installed; tab automation, browser integration and any bundled extension were not technically tested.

The description states that Chrome/Safari icons belong to their owners and disclaims endorsement. That statement is material and is preserved here. It does not erase evidence of users mistaking this product for Chrome, and it does not by itself resolve a trademark or App Review compliance assessment.

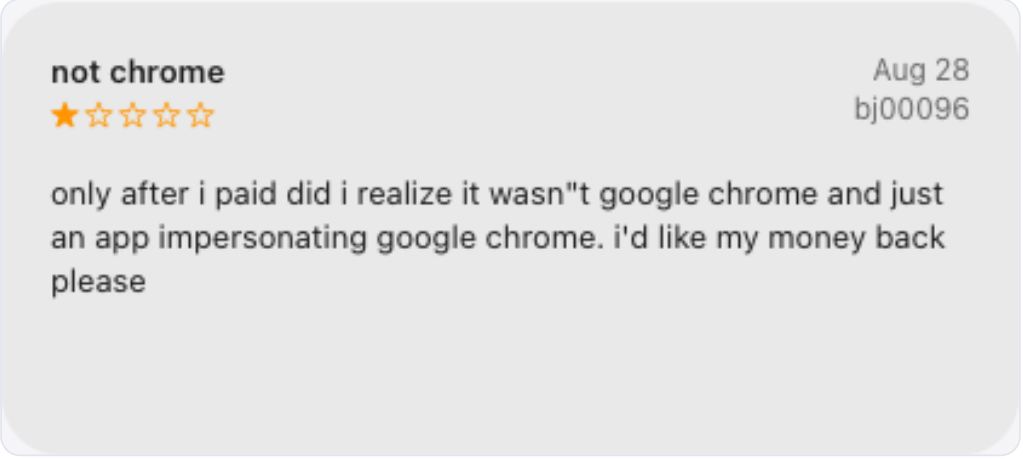

E2; E11. Editorial assessment concerns the combined presentation, not a finding of criminal fraud.

Buyers describe the wrong-product purchase

The supplied analysis selected two negative reviews. Fresh Apple page data and the expanded native Ratings & Reviews page expose additional relevant accounts, including superficially positive reviews that call the product Google Chrome. Those are meaningful signs of identity confusion even when their star rating is favorable.

The current lookup API reports no aggregate ratings while the expanded native review view shows an aggregate. These inconsistent Apple surfaces are not a reliable basis for a total-user or prevalence estimate. The table uses identifiable review content, not a claim that all users were deceived.

No transaction, refund decision or reviewer identity was independently authenticated. Complaints about file associations and uninstallation are user allegations; no malicious behavior or unauthorized charge was established.

Their versions and bundle identifiers match the investigated products. The analysis was static: no app was launched, no purchase was made and no embedded key was used to query a cloud service.

Both app bundles passed codesign verification with deep and strict checks. Open App carries TeamIdentifier FR7MAHZ2V8; Apps for Google App carries S9PP5DB44Z. Both show Apple Mac OS Application Signing as the outer authority, which is an Apple distribution signature, not a shared developer identity. Distinct team IDs establish different signing teams, not necessarily different ultimate owners.

Cross-comparison covered 96 regular files in Open App and 167 in Apps for Google App, excluding App Store receipts, archive bookkeeping and symlinks. The only byte-identical file pair is the standard eight-byte PkgInfo file. No common app-specific backend or Firebase project was found in these two packages. This does not rule out shared source code, contractors, inherited components or common control; builds and resource encodings can differ.

Both executables contain the same short feedback phrase, I have some thing to say:. That is a possible reused snippet, but is too short and reusable to identify an operator. Shared Apple/Swift runtime strings and generic translated labels are likewise not counted as ownership evidence.

The substantive new lead is in the IdeaNest package: its executable contains customercare@appvance.org and old Blogspot policy URLs. Following those exact references reveals an AppVance publisher/support association, detailed below. No equivalent AppVance contact was found in Open App.

E34; E35; E38. Static inspection reports capabilities and included content, not observed runtime behavior or an Apple enforcement finding.

Brand imagery inside the packages, not just on store pages

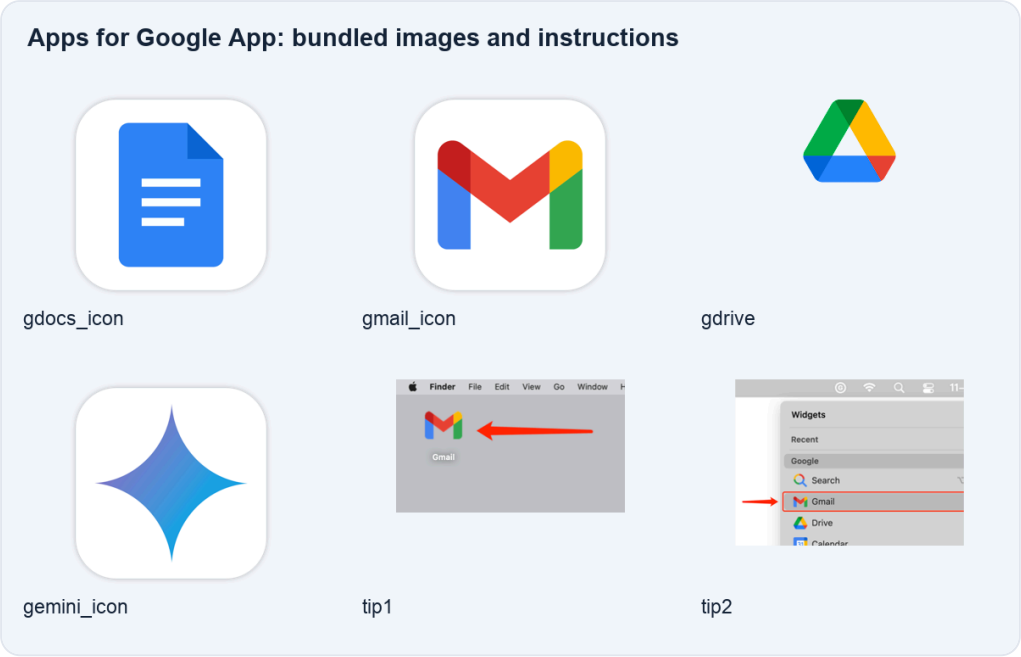

Open App's compiled asset catalog includes browser artwork under the names bigChrome, bigSafari, paywallChrome, paywallSafari, paywallFirefox, paywallEdge and paywallOpera. The decoded images visibly reproduce the respective browser logos. These are distinct from Open App's currently observed four-square icon; older store icons are documented separately in E48. Resource names show how the developer labeled the included artwork; static extraction alone does not show which screen was displayed to a particular customer.

The executable also contains AppleScript commands directed at Google Chrome and Safari, and its signed entitlements permit requesting Apple Events automation for those browsers. It registers http and https URL schemes and includes tab, bookmark and browser-management components. These findings support the separately sold browser-utility description. They do not make it Google Chrome, and they do not establish unauthorized access or browser hijacking.

The IdeaNest package contains Google service logos and two bundled instructional images: one depicts a Gmail-branded desktop shortcut and another a Google/Gmail entry in a widget-selection interface. Its launcher JSON maps service names and actions to Google URLs. These are concrete examples of the third-party product presenting Google imagery. Use for service compatibility must still be assessed in context; the package alone does not establish a trademark licence violation.

Open App: images bundled in Assets.car Images decoded from the compiled asset catalog; labeled resource montage, not a running-app screenshot. E35.

Apps for Google App: bundled images and instructions Images decoded from the compiled asset catalog; labeled resource montage, not a running-app screenshot. E35.

E35. Labeled montages of decoded bundled resources; no app execution or live UI capture.

Firebase and debug configuration: useful leads, not proof of tracking

Apps for Google App includes production GoogleService-Info.plist for bundle kj.gapps and Firebase project apps-6e0e0. A second file, GoogleService-Info-debug.plist, names com.yx.GAppLauncher and project apps-debug-84c9e. The debug bundle name is a development-provenance lead; it is not a person's identity or evidence of nationality. Neither project ID nor the debug bundle string was found in Open App.

The package includes Firebase Analytics and Remote Config components. Both bundled Google-service configuration files set IS_ANALYTICS_ENABLED to false. A local default named gapps_review_config contains active:v1, remindAfter:60 and showMainAfterUpgradeClosed:false, alongside a review-related configuration class in the executable. These facts establish included configuration and software capabilities; they do not demonstrate that analytics ran, what a live server returned or that reviews were manipulated.

An included YouTube ad-blocking userscript identifies the public iamfugui/youtube-adb project and declares an MIT licence. A common third-party component is not an operator identifier. Another localization string refers to a ChatGPT-API app, consistent with leftover cross-product material, but it does not establish an active AI feature in this Google launcher.

This was an offline comparison of app-specific identifiers and bundled configuration, without querying a cloud backend using the embedded configuration. In these two supplied builds, a matching private backend was not established.

Noncredential configuration identifiers from the IdeaNest package

Configuration	Bundle / project	Interpretation
Production Google-service plist	kj.gapps / apps-6e0e0	Identifier for the supplied Google launcher
Debug Google-service plist	com.yx.GAppLauncher / apps-debug-84c9e	Bundled development identity; no person inferred
Analytics flag	IS_ANALYTICS_ENABLED=false in both plists	Static configuration, not a runtime traffic finding
Remote Config default	gapps_review_config / v1 / remindAfter60	Review-related configuration; live behavior untested
Open App comparison	No matching project or debug-bundle string found	No shared backend established from these copies

E34; E35; E38. Credentials omitted; static presence is not evidence of runtime collection.

Innovatech–IdeaNest: the documented connection

Apple identifies two different developer accounts: Innovatech Solutions LLC (1821609828) and IdeaNest INC (1840069799). Their German and Irish trader declarations give the same Sheridan address, including the N suite and the same ZIP+4. This is a direct, reproducible address association between the accounts, not an inference based on names or nationalities.

The two businesses use different D-U-N-S numbers, app-support emails and legal/support domains. The newly supplied corporate filings add a shared administration email and matching registered-agent changes. They also name different annual-report signers. A common beneficial owner, staff, Apple signing identity or financial control is not established.

The matching administrative contacts, consecutive annual-report dates and same-day agent changes raise a credible concern about coordinated administration and potentially common control. Different named signatories do not rule out that possibility. The available records establish shared administrative arrangements; they do not yet identify a common controlling person.

The 12-minute interval is between the state’s filing stamps, not a measurement of when the applicants submitted instructions. A common corporate-service provider could explain the shared email, addresses, filer and processing pattern together. These related administrative indicators are assessed as a combined pattern, not counted as independent proofs of ownership.

The official Wyoming commercial registered-agent roster lists service providers at 30 N Gould St. A corporate-service address can be used by unrelated businesses. Therefore this report describes an address-linked pair of publishers; it does not present the address as proof that one person operates both accounts.

The current Innovatech US catalog returns Open App and GroupX; the IdeaNest catalog returns Apps for Google App. Both publisher families promote utility access to established browser or Google services. This shared market positioning strengthens the reason to compare them, but is not independent ownership evidence.

The shared email is a corporate-filings contact, not the app-support contact: info@acompanyinus.com appears on both annual reports and on a company-formation provider's own website. No shared unique analytics identifier, common bundle-ID prefix or cross-domain app-operator declaration was identified. The report separates this verified administration link from the still unresolved ownership question.

Corporate filings: formation, annual reports and agent changes

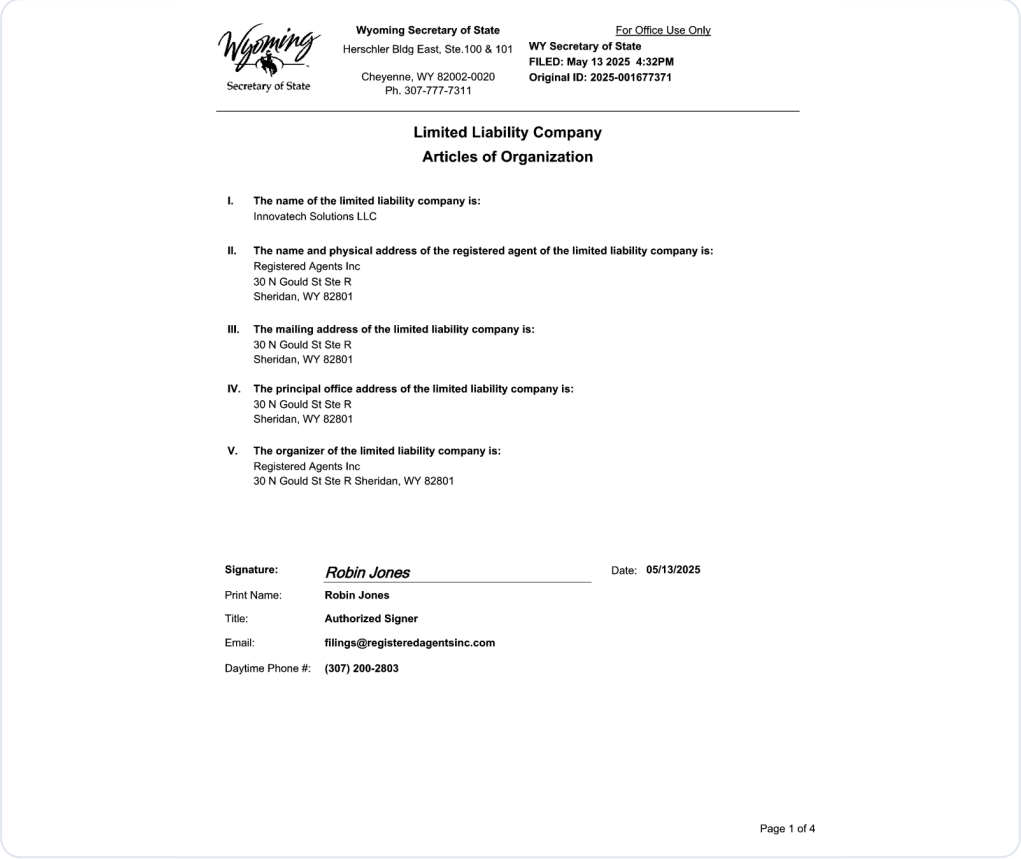

The six PDFs supplied for this investigation contain 16 scanned pages: formation articles and certificates for each company, one 2026 annual-report page for each, and a three-page registered-agent change packet for each. The original filing IDs match the earlier index leads: Innovatech 2025-001677371 and IdeaNest 2025-001713988. These are user-supplied copies bearing Wyoming filing details; this investigation did not independently retrieve the six PDFs through the CAPTCHA-protected portal. No shareholder register, private operating agreement or annual-report worksheet was supplied; this is not a claim to have every record in the state file.

Innovatech's articles were filed on 13 May 2025 at 4:32 PM. IdeaNest's articles were filed on 3 July 2025 at 9:14 AM. Both appoint Registered Agents Inc at 30 N Gould St Ste R, Sheridan, and name that service company as organizer or incorporator. Robin Jones signs both as Authorized Signer using filings@registeredagentsinc.com. This is an agent-side formation role, not a statement that Jones owns or operates either app.

The annual reports move the mailing and principal-office addresses of both entities to 75 E 3rd St, Sheridan, WY 82801. Each still displays Registered Agents Inc in its registered-agent field. The later change packets explicitly request changes to both mailing and principal addresses and appoint WY Commercial Registered Agent LLC at 75 E 3rd St. This documents a registry address change; it does not show a relocation of an app-development team.

Both change packets are dated 19 April 2026 and bear a received stamp of 27 April 2026. The Wyoming filing stamps are 15 May 2026 at 4:24 PM for Innovatech, amendment 2026-006614290, and 4:36 PM for IdeaNest, amendment 2026-006614304. These times are reproduced as printed; no timezone conversion is applied. The 12-minute filing interval and same execution date are a documented processing pattern, compatible with a service provider handling multiple clients.

Dustin Looper signs both change forms as Authorized Filer. On each accompanying agent-consent page, Looper is Customer Service Representative of the new registered agent, with support@wycra.com. The provider's own website sells registered-agent changes, filing assistance and business-address use. These documents do not identify Looper as either publisher's director or beneficial owner.

Named people: different signers, one shared administration email

Innovatech's annual report, AR 17436568, is signed and printed jiesong hu, dated 16 April 2026. The LLC form does not state whether this signer is a member, manager, employee or outside representative. The signer can be attributed to this report; ownership or a director role cannot be assigned from this page.

IdeaNest's annual report, AR 17573570, dated 17 April 2026, explicitly lists QIONGXIANG YU twice: as Director and as President, at the same 75 E 3rd St business address. That name also appears in the signature and printed-name fields labeled Treasurer or Fiscal Agent. The listed director and president roles are documented; share ownership is not.

Both reports give info@acompanyinus.com. The provider's own contact page publishes that exact email. Its services page advertises company formation, registered-agent services and annual-report work. This establishes an exact shared corporate-administration contact and supports a shared service-provider explanation. The documents do not disclose the private engagement agreement or who instructed each filing.

The two individual names are different and must not be merged. Searches for the names, alone and with the entity names, did not establish an independently corroborated profile or another Apple account. Unrelated namesakes are excluded. None of these filings gives the individuals' nationality, home residence or an ultimate beneficial-owner declaration; no country attribution is inferred from a name or from the service provider's Chinese-language website.

Matching agent changes: same date, same filer, 12-minute interval

The paired first pages identify two different entities and two different amendment numbers. The signature pages show the same date, filer, contact email and checked instructions to change both mailing and principal-office addresses. Both packets include a separate consent naming the correct respective entity. They are not duplicate copies of the same company's change form.

Taken together, the records establish common administrative touchpoints and closely aligned processing, raising a credible concern about coordinated administration and potentially common control. Different annual-report signatories do not rule out that possibility. The filings still do not resolve whether one app operator instructed the work or separate clients used the same intermediaries; no common controlling person is identified.

All six entries correspond to the supplied PDFs by entity, date and filing/report number. No additional entry appears in the supplied lists.

The table records what was reconciled, rather than claiming an independent portal download. The automated research requests still returned anti-bot pages without the corporate history. The History transcription was supplied separately; the document dates, annual-report numbers and amendment IDs were checked against the scanned pages. Where History says See Filing ID, the original ID is taken from the corresponding formation document.

The set therefore accounts for all entries in the supplied history lists. The annual-report copies are one page each and refer to a worksheet that was not supplied. No shareholder register, private operating agreement, nominee agreement or beneficial-owner declaration is included. Matching the listed filings does not establish a common owner.

Further named-person checks: no additional firm attributed

Follow-up searches used the exact names jiesong hu and QIONGXIANG YU, reversed name order and spaced variants, with company names and business/app terms. Indexed-web checks included OpenCorporates, Companies House, Wyoming and Florida registry domains. These were targeted public searches, not an exhaustive direct search of every jurisdiction.

Direct public Companies House officer searches for the distinctive terms Jiesong and Qiongxiang each returned No results found on 7 November 2026. Broader multiword queries returned unrelated fuzzy matches and are not treated as evidence of zero records. No additional company or app-developer account was confidently attributed to either person in the checked sources.

A third-party directory returned a same-name Qiongxiang Yu business entry, but the examined page supplied no corroborating identifier linking it to IdeaNest and exposed placeholder identity fields. The candidate is excluded from the attribution findings. Unrelated professional, gaming and company-name matches are also excluded. This result leaves the documented signer/director roles intact and the ultimate ownership question unresolved.

Both declared business numbers fall in Bandwidth-allocated blocks

The Apple trader panels publish +1 7028482899 for Innovatech and +1 2092592861 for IdeaNest. A block-level lookup yields another service-level overlap: both numbers fall in thousands-block allocations listed under the Bandwidth group. Innovatech is in 702-848-2xxx, Bandwidth.com CLEC, LLC - NV, OCN 075F; IdeaNest is in 209-259-2xxx, Bandwidth.com CLEC, LLC - CA, OCN 981E.

The seventh digit matters. A broad 702-848 prefix lookup can return T-Mobile as the parent prefix holder. The more specific 702-848-2 thousands block, containing Innovatech's 2899 line number, is listed under Bandwidth. Local Calling Guide and TelcoData both reproduce the relevant allocation; the raw pages and retrieval times are preserved privately.

Bandwidth describes itself as a wholesale communications and VoIP provider. Its customers can incorporate Bandwidth numbers into their own retail services. Thus the shared allocated carrier group is not evidence of a shared consumer VoIP app, reseller account or subscriber. These public allocation records also do not identify the beneficial owner of either developer.

This check did not obtain portability-corrected live carrier/LRN results. Number portability permits switching among wireline, IP and wireless providers without changing the number. Accordingly, the finding concerns the listed number blocks: it does not confirm the current terminating operator or the current line type for either exact number. No telephone call or SMS was sent.

The supported comparison is therefore two Bandwidth-allocated business-number blocks, alongside the two address matches and shared registrar already documented. The retail VoIP provider, any common subscription and the person operating the numbers remain unestablished.

Company and domain research: what can be attributed

The supplied formation and amendment packets now document the exact corporate filing IDs, replacing reliance on name-index entries alone. The annual reports identify one Innovatech signer and IdeaNest's named director/president. The corporate documents do not contain Apple developer IDs or D-U-N-S numbers; attribution to the app publishers rests on the matching company identities and business-address context.

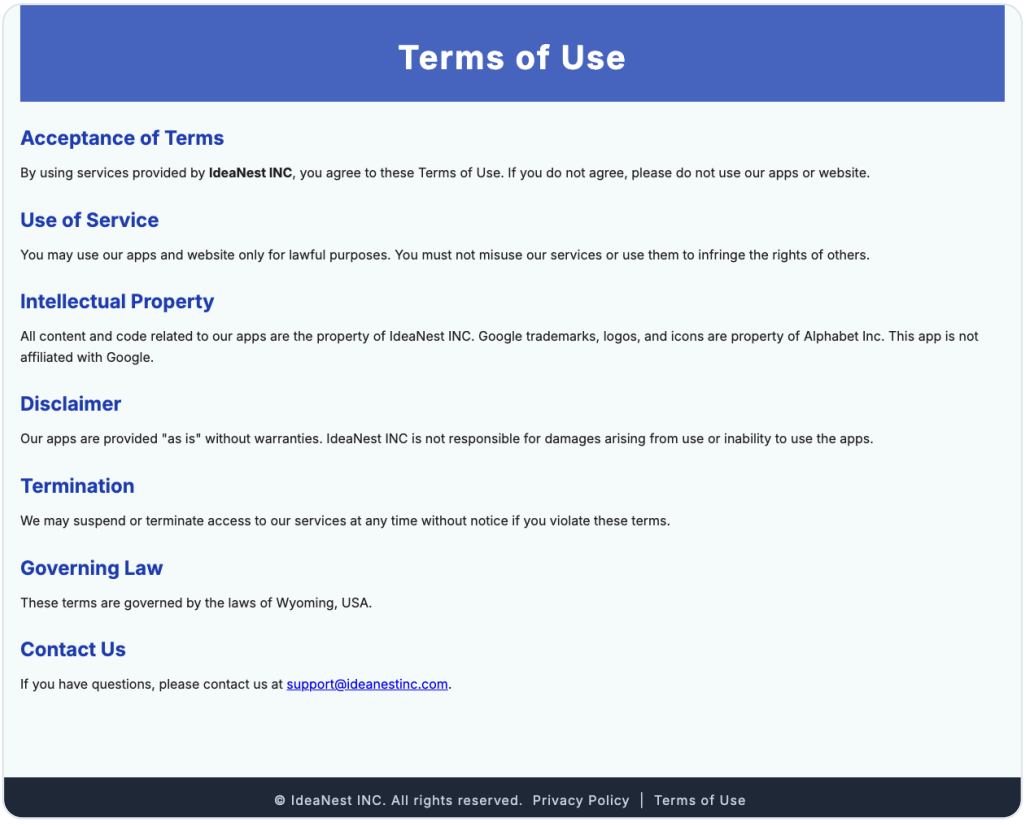

Searches also return unrelated Innovatech businesses in Virginia, North Carolina and New York. Their executives and founders are not attributed to this Apple seller. No verified beneficial owner was recovered for these app publishers in this investigation.

RDAP records date innovatechsolu.com to 15 May 2025, ideanestinc.com to 9 July 2025. Domain registration dates are not company-incorporation dates. The Apps for Google App release predates the current IdeaNest support domain; that establishes a newer web identity, not account-sale or enforcement evasion.

Both publishers operate dedicated domains. Innovatech's homepage uses generic app-marketing claims and template-style feature/screenshot blocks. IdeaNest advertises consulting, strategy and design with stock imagery. Neither examined homepage explains the relationship, if any, between these two businesses. Generic web presentation alone is not evidence of fraud.

Where the two sites are registered, how email is routed, and what actually matches

Both domains currently use Cloudflare, Inc. as registrar, IANA ID 1910. This is confirmed in registry RDAP and the registrar referral, not inferred from the nameservers. innovatechsolu.com was registered on 15 May 2025; ideanestinc.com on 9 July 2025. These records identify the current registrar and domain creation dates, not the original purchase account, payment method or beneficial owner.

Cloudflare Registrar requires Cloudflare authoritative DNS, so shared registrar plus Cloudflare nameservers are related parts of the same setup, not two independent ownership clues. The actual nameserver pairs differ. Public A/AAAA records and HTTP headers show Cloudflare proxy/CDN infrastructure; they do not reveal a common origin server or establish the underlying hosting provider.

The mail configurations differ. Innovatech advertises Cloudflare Email Routing MX hosts and its Cloudflare SPF include. IdeaNest advertises Zoho Mail MX hosts, a Zoho SPF include and a Zoho domain-verification value. MX records identify incoming-mail routing; they do not identify the person reading mail. In particular, Cloudflare routing does not disclose Innovatech's eventual forwarding destination. No message was sent and no mailbox was tested.

Both live TLS certificates are issued by Google Trust Services WE1. Their serial numbers, public-key fingerprints, issuance times and covered names differ. The certificate data examined contains each domain and its own wildcard; no certificate covering both businesses was found. Matching edge-certificate issuer is not a common owner or signing-key finding.

Twenty-seven linked same-domain resources from the two homepages were retrieved and hashed. The only cross-site identical resource in that set is Cloudflare's standard email-decode.min.js, SHA-256 2595496fe48df6fcf9b1bc57c29a744c121eb4dd11566466bc13d2e52e6bbcc8. Both robots.txt responses are also byte-identical,1248 bytes, containing the standard Cloudflare Content Signals policy preamble. Neither is a distinctive publisher-authored code fingerprint.

Innovatech's css/styles.css begins with a webthemez credit and its site loads Bootstrap, jQuery, Owl Carousel and related animation/lightbox libraries. IdeaNest's examined homepage uses inline CSS, an Inter Google Fonts request, Icons8 graphics and Unsplash images. No shared custom asset, analytics ID, verification token, publisher email or cross-domain operator declaration was identified in the examined pages/resources. This is a bounded public-source comparison, not an audit of private infrastructure.

The infrastructure findings add a verified shared registrar and CDN stack to the address and corporate-administration associations. They do not establish common control. The later binary inspection adds an IdeaNest–AppVance support/history trail, which is a separate link and is not attributed to Innovatech.

Historical DNS and registration: was there an earlier host?

An additional historical search examined public nameserver-history data, Certificate Transparency records, web-archive captures, WHOIS snapshot availability and passive-DNS/scan sources. Current registrar data alone does not show where a domain was originally purchased. Cloudflare is confirmed as the current registrar for both; an independently dated initial registrar record was not recovered.

CompleteDNS returned one recorded nameserver event for each domain: Innovatech on 17 May 2025 already used hope.ns.cloudflare.com and randall.ns.cloudflare.com; IdeaNest on 11 July 2025 already used athena.ns.cloudflare.com and maxim.ns.cloudflare.com. Each observation is two days after the registry creation date. These are observation dates from that dataset, not corrected registration dates or proof that no earlier configuration ever existed.

Innovatech Certificate Transparency records include a certificate issued by CLOUDFLARE, INC., Cloudflare TLS Issuing ECC CA 1, with notBefore on 15 May 2025, the registration day. IdeaNest has Google Trust Services WE1 entries dated 9 July 2025, also its registration day; that issuer name alone is not proof of Cloudflare activation. Certificate validity dates can be backdated and are not exact DNS-switch timestamps.

The earliest retrieved Innovatech homepage replay, captured 12 July 2025, preserves x-archive-orig-server: cloudflare and an original CF-Ray header. The retrieved IdeaNest replay from 17 October 2025 preserves the same original server identity. The replay server itself identifies as nginx; that is the Internet Archive replay infrastructure, not a recovered origin host for either publisher.

No earlier non-Cloudflare nameserver, dated non-proxy A record or attributable origin-hosting provider was established in the accessible material. Public urlscan searches returned no results; the WHOIS snapshot-availability queries returned no capture. ViewDNS and SecurityTrails returned 403, and the AlienVault passive-DNS endpoint returned 429. Those access outcomes leave historical coverage incomplete; they are not evidence that no earlier host existed.

The supported finding is therefore early Cloudflare use, rather than a documented migration from a named previous host. Underlying hosting can also exist behind Cloudflare from the beginning. These records do not identify an original hosting vendor, prove that both sites share an origin server, or establish a common owner.

Apps for Google App: launcher branding and a different seller

Apps for Google App, app 6504402138, is published by IdeaNest INC. It claims widgets, menu-bar access, shortcuts and hotkeys for Google services. The first line disclaims Google affiliation. Its original promotion displays a grid of recognizable Google product icons, including Drive, Gmail, Docs, Maps and YouTube.

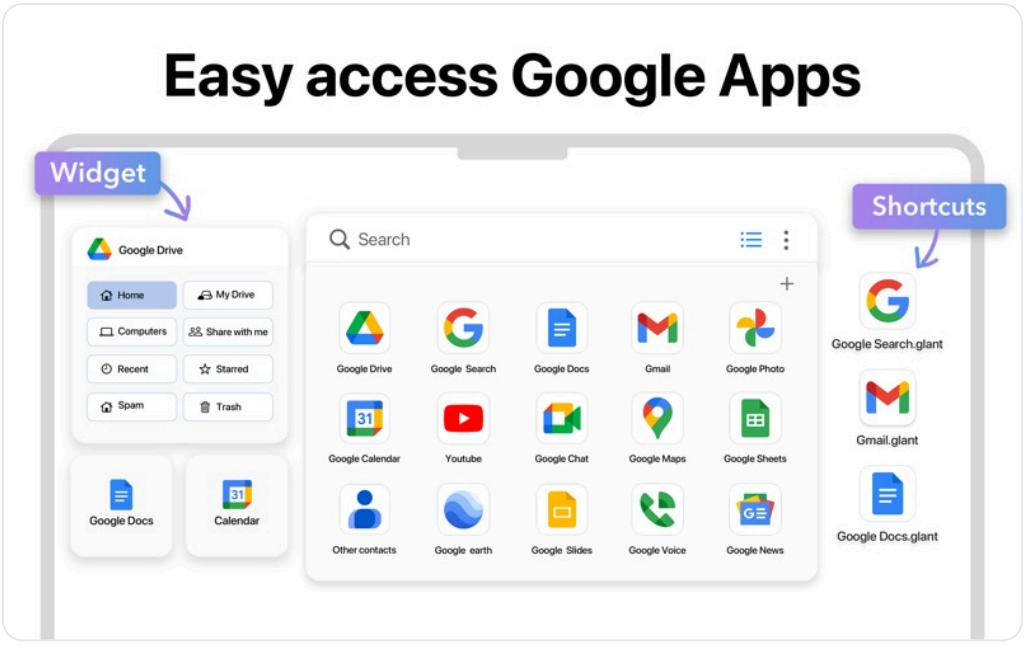

IdeaNest's current app icon is a flower-like cluster of seven colored circles, not Google's G wordmark. The concrete branding concern lies in the Google-oriented name and promotional artwork; color overlap alone is not an infringement finding.

This image is evidence of brand-led marketing; it is not by itself proof that the app impersonates Google or lacks useful functionality. Current positive reviews describe working shortcuts and a useful separate workspace. A critical allegation concerning another user profile appears with a developer response denying cross-profile access. No login/session isolation test was performed, so no data-access finding is made.

The publisher's terms name Wyoming law and describe the service as independent. The shared Sheridan address with Innovatech remains a lead for identity research. There is no evidence that buying this launcher provides a Google Workspace subscription, or that the annual/lifetime charge is paid to Google.

Portfolio and dated history

GroupX - Menubar Browser (6747471313) is the second live Innovatech title. Its bundle prefix com.innovatech matches the main app. It describes saved browser-tab groups, locking and menu-bar browsing, and includes an explicit third-party disclaimer. This is a confirmed same-account product, not a second developer account.

Apple lists Open App's first release as 27 August 2025. Its version history also displays an earlier 1.0 entry dated 22 August; these are different Apple date fields. Version 1.3.2, dated 30 October 2025, explicitly states that the app name changed. Two later historical icon designs have now been recovered from August2026 Apple artwork references. The original August2025 launch name/icon remains unresolved; no harmless-launch-to-scam sequence or App Review bypass is inferred from that missing period.

A newly recovered Apple replay dated3 August2026 identifies the same app6748339444 as Open App for Chrome & Firefox. The verified10 August2026 replay names it Open App for Chrome & Safari. Those dated captures also reference distinct Chrome-like icon designs, documented in E48. This brackets an observed browser-name change within a week; it does not reveal the original pre-October2025 name or establish that App Review was bypassed. E24.

The Wayback availability endpoint returned an accessible 10 August 2026 replay showing the same Open App for Chrome & Safari name. An exact query-free CDX request returned no records, whereas the wildcard query failed with 503. The available replay is not launch-era evidence. Failed or empty queries do not mean that no history exists.

The underlying investigation and dated source captures were prepared on 7 November 2026. Before publication on 9 November, Apple's exact-ID API still returned Open App 6748339444, Apps for Google App 6504402138 and GroupX 6747471313 in the United States, Germany and Ireland. Gmail 6773641239 and AI Bot 6736975220 returned no exact-ID results. Direct product-page requests returned HTTP 429, so this latest attempt does not independently establish product-page availability or a fresh removal. The report's earlier page observations retain their explicit 7 November dates.

E49. API results, webpage-access outcomes and earlier dated evidence are kept separate.

What Apple should examine

The strongest case for App Review is the documented wrong-product purchase: browser-brand names and promotions attracting Chrome-seeking customers, repeated explicit confusion, and payment requests for a separately published utility. A disclaimer should be assessed alongside the whole presentation and the actual customer accounts.

App Review Guidelines 2.3 (accurate metadata), 4.1 (copycats), 5.2 (intellectual property/third-party permissions) and 5.1.1 (privacy disclosures) provide relevant review questions. This report does not establish an Apple enforcement decision or an adjudicated trademark violation. Functional brand references and legitimate third-party utilities must be distinguished from misleading supplier identity.

Consumers looking for Chrome should use Google's official download instructions. Before purchasing a third-party utility, check the seller and what the payment unlocks; an existing official-service subscription is a different entitlement.

E11; E15. No app installation, purchase, account creation or developer contact was performed.
