NOTEBOOKLM IMPERSONATION AND MISLEADING-PRESENTATION WARNING · AI STUDY TOOLS

A NotebookLM lookalike. A buyer called it out.

Hamna Nadeem combines Notebook/LM wording with Google-style blue arches, creating a misleading impression of Google's study product. A buyer explicitly complained that it was not the original NotebookLM, and the developer replied that it is independent. The app advertises $4.99 weekly renewal; this report also follows its policy blog and older products.

A buyer noticed the imitation. The developer confirmed it is independent.

Hamna Nadeem's app combines the words Notebook and LM with nested blue arches, closely echoing Google's research product. This is a misleading first impression: the actual seller is Hamna Nadeem. The app's own policy says AI requests go to OpenAI through a Firebase backend, not to Google's NotebookLM service.

On 9 November, US reviewer Jessica Thomas80 warned that it was not the original LM notebook and called the features useless. The developer replied that the app is independent and pointed to disclaimers in its legal and support pages. The complaint and response document the identity problem directly; the reviewer's word fraud is not treated as a proven fraud ruling.

The listing also has a positive studying review and a complaint about processing only the first page of documents. Those are individual experiences; this investigation did not install the app, upload a document or make a purchase. The point established here is the misleading brand presentation, supported by a buyer's explicit objection.

Current Apple review cards: the wrong-product complaint, another critical review and the developer's independence response are visible. E2.

The verified trail is Hamna’s account and policy blog.

Apple’s current profile and exact account lookups return one product: AI Notebook. The same app ID has iPhone/iPad and Mac versions. The developer’s linked Hamna Apps blog contains 25 support and legal posts for a wider product portfolio.

Historical Apple search-index records and the still-live blog connect three recoverable older IDs: Wick AI, QR Studio and Image Search For Safari. All three currently have negative exact-ID lookups and 404 product pages in US, Germany and Ireland. That supports unavailable listings, not an Apple account termination: the Hamna profile and Notebook app are still live.

The proposed Miten Motisariya connection remains unconfirmed. The source analysis flagged two matching images, but all 17 current Notebook promotions compared with all eight WhatsApp promotions produced no exact matches. The policies and support channels differ as well. The diagram keeps that lead separate from the documented Hamna trail.

Public US and Irish offers. The description advertises a three-day free trial for the yearly plan; no weekly trial was verified. Benefits, purchase screens and actual charges were not tested. E2/E6/E4.

Estimated yearly cost on weekly renewal: $259.48.

Continuous renewal at $4.99 weekly gives an estimated yearly cost of $259.48, about 6.5 times the $39.99 yearly offer. In Ireland, €5.99 weekly gives about €311.48 yearly, around 6.9 times the €44.99 yearly offer.

Assumes unchanged prices, continuous renewal and no cancellation or discounts; calendar-year billing can vary and offer benefits may differ. A high weekly price alone is not evidence of a fraudulent charge.

The familiar arches are doing the misleading work.

The independent iPhone/iPad icon uses several nested blue arches, dark blue edges and two stars. Its Mac icon places the same idea on a raised white rounded tile. Google's current official icon also uses nested blue and lilac arches on white. The original files are different; the distinctive visual idea and the Notebook/LM wording work together to suggest the Google product.

Google renamed NotebookLM to Gemini Notebook on 16 July 2026. That is why the official reference is labelled Gemini Notebook / formerly NotebookLM. Hamna's app is a separate product with its own notes editor, quizzes, flashcards and AI chat. Its feature list alone is not evidence of impersonation; the copied visual cues and wrong-product complaint are the warning.

The independence disclaimer appears in the linked legal/support documents. It does not remove the familiar identity presented in the icon and listing title. Apple should assess the first impression buyers see before opening those documents.

It is an OpenAI-backed app, and its documents need scrutiny.

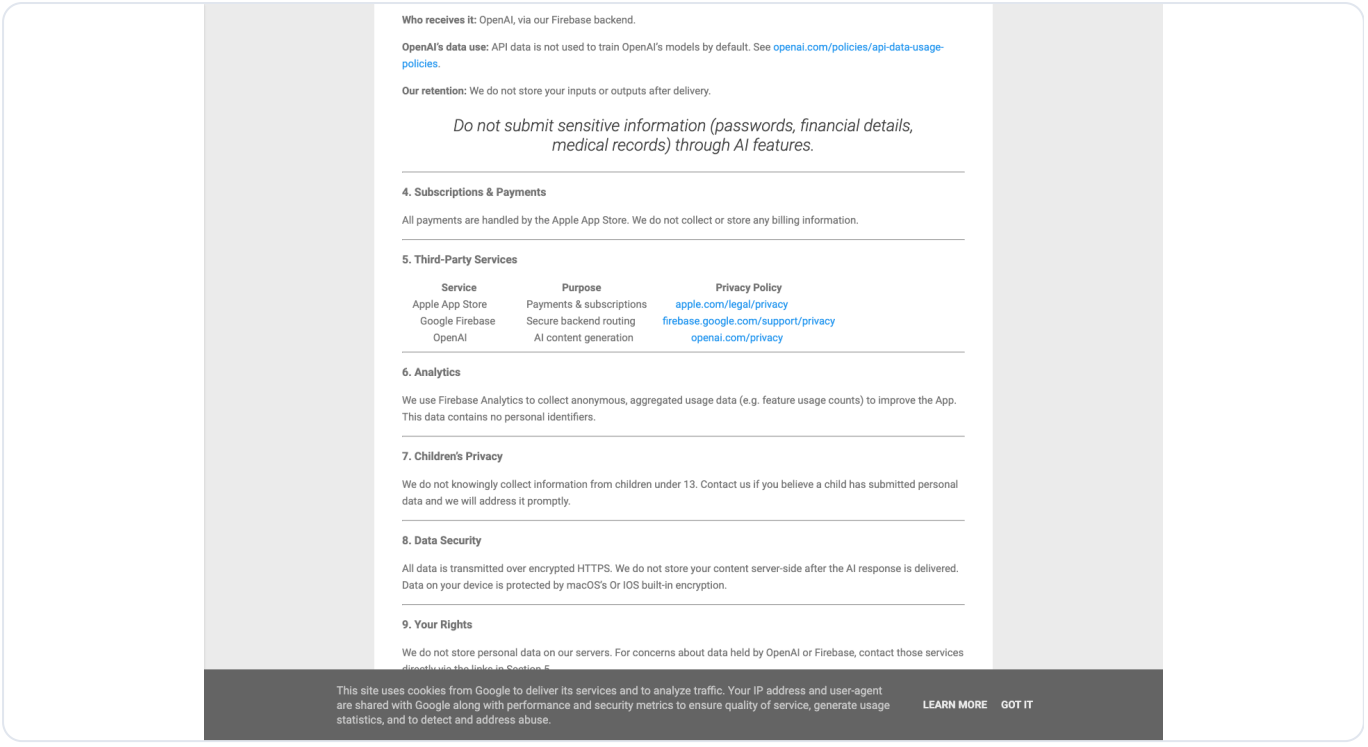

The linked policy says document text, transcripts, clipboard content and chat requests pass through the developer’s Firebase backend to OpenAI. Local note history therefore does not mean AI processing stays on the device. This is the developer’s published explanation; the actual traffic, model or backend was not tested.

Apple’s label discloses unlinked User Content, including audio. It is not a Data Not Collected label. However, the policy also names Firebase Analytics and the EULA discusses usage, device, performance and crash data. The developer should explain how those statements map to its narrower public privacy label and actual configuration.

The policy says it does not retain submitted content after the response. That is a published promise rather than an independently tested retention guarantee. The documents name no Pakistan company, registered address or commercial-country declaration.

The support trail contains unfinished policy text.

Apple lists no separate Developer Website for Notebook. The legal links point to Hamna Apps on Google's Blogger service. Hosted documents can be legitimate; the specific issue is whether the published material accurately identifies each product and its practices.

A related Image Search For Safari policy still contains an editing instruction to confirm that an email carried over from another app's policy is correct. It also leaves a note asking for the governing jurisdiction to be checked before publication. These are visible signs of unfinished review in a document offered to users.

The same blog contains Classyfi and AI Exam Preparation documents. One Classyfi agreement's explanatory text describes AI Exam Preparation instead. These documents establish a shared public support trail and a need for better disclosures; they do not by themselves prove an additional Apple account or that each product is a scam.

Who publishes it? Apple identifies Hamna Nadeem.

The Apple developer ID is 6775619996. The current US and UK account lookups and US/UK/Morocco profile pages show only the Notebook product. Older indexed profiles list a wider catalog, but those cached results are not the current app count.

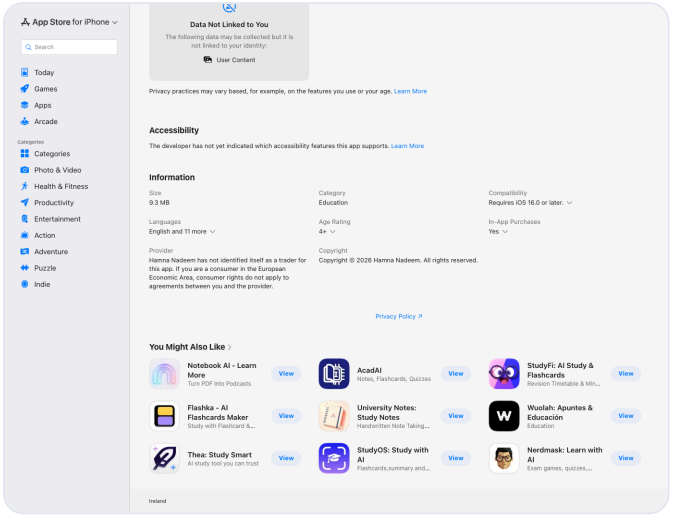

The German and Irish provider panels say Hamna Nadeem has not identified as a trader. Neither the inspected Apple disclosures nor the directly linked Blogger profile establishes a registered country or company number. Country remains Unknown. A namesake student or social profile is not a verified identity match, and no country is assigned from the developer's name.

Three older product IDs can be checked independently.

These names and IDs are historical Apple-index leads corroborated by Hamna's still-live product documents. Their current full product pages return 404 and exact lookups return no matching app in US, Germany and Ireland. The same blog also documents image/PDF converters, AI Exam Preparation and Classyfi. Exact Apple IDs for those additional names were not verified, so they are not counted as identified apps in this report. A disappeared listing does not establish who removed it or why.

The proposed WhatsApp account link is still unconfirmed.

The supplied analysis reports two identical screenshots linking Notebook to Messenger Web for WhatsApp, published by Miten Motisariya. This investigation checked the exact Apple products and their original current marketing files, including every Notebook Mac image.

No exact file or decoded-image match was found across 17 Notebook and eight WhatsApp promotions, and the marketing sets are visibly different. Historical, cropped or resized reuse is not ruled out, but the supplied flag does not currently establish a common operator. The policy URLs and support channels also differ.

Miten’s account is included as an examined reference, not as a confirmed associate of Hamna. The earlier WhatsApp investigation remains separately linked for readers who want the underlying product warning.

The Apple rules this presentation appears to breach.

This report's assessment is that the combined familiar arches and Notebook/LM name fragments imitate Google's product identity and can mislead buyers. The user complaint and developer's independence response strengthen that assessment. Apple should review the specific presentation against the rules below.

Approval or a past App Review pass is not proof that the identity is authorized. No private Google permission or Apple infringement decision was recovered; this report does not invent a confirmed enforcement ruling or a deliberate review-bypass sequence.

Specific conduct mapped to current Apple requirements

Apple provision	Requirement in plain English	Observed trigger and assessment
2.3 · Accurate Metadata	Names, icons, descriptions and screenshots must accurately represent the app.	Familiar Google-style icon and Notebook/LM wording lead to a product-identity complaint. Apparent misleading-presentation issue.
2.3.7 · Names and keywords	Use a distinctive name; do not exploit popular app names or trademarks to manipulate discovery.	Notebook and LM fragments combined with the matching visual identity invite confusion with NotebookLM. Search-rank manipulation itself was not measured.
4.1(a), (b), (c) · Copycats and impersonation	Minor rework of another app's identity, impersonation and unauthorized use of its icon/brand are prohibited.	Nested blue/lilac arches and related naming closely echo Google's reference; independence disclaimer is in linked documents. Apparent copycat/impersonation concern; permission not verified.

Apple provision	Requirement in plain English	Observed trigger and assessment
5.2.1 · Intellectual Property	Do not use misleading or copycat names/metadata or protected material without rights.	The same combined identity is the concern. A legal infringement ruling or absence of a private licence was not established.
5.1.1(i) · Privacy policy	Explain actual data collection and use clearly and accurately.	Policy analytics and EULA technical-data wording need reconciliation with the narrower Apple content label. An implementation-level violation is not proven.

Another NotebookLM-style identity in the same report library.

The earlier five-app investigation documents other independent sellers using blue/purple nested arches and NotebookLM-style names. This app repeats that visible presentation pattern. A recurring design pattern is not proof that the accounts share an owner, nationality or code.

No original Hamna launch icon was recovered. Current release notes mention NoteMind and later Notebook workspace features, but they do not show a dated generic-to-Google branding switch. The strongest warning here is the current identity and documented buyer confusion.

EULA identifies Hamna Nadeem Apps and the app. It reserves collection of non-identifying device, performance, crash and usage information. Compare this with the narrower Apple User Content label; implementation and consent were not tested. It includes an independent-app disclaimer. Fresh HTTP 200.

E12 / Notebook support: independent-app disclosure

Support page identifies developer Hamna Nadeem and a project Gmail contact shared throughout the blog. It explicitly disclaims official ownership/affiliation and explains purchase restoration/cancellation. Instructions to contact support are not a record of an actual billing complaint. E13 / Official Google brand reference Google's official app is now Gemini Notebook, app 6737527615, seller Google LLC, developer 281956209, bundle com.google.NotebookLM. Original current blue/lilac nested-arch icon retrieved. This is a reference product, not part of Hamna's account trail. Fresh HTTP 200.

E18 / Hamna Apps: complete 25-post public feed

Public Blogger feed contains 25 posts across Notebook, Wick AI, QR Studio, Image Search For Safari, image/PDF conversion, AI Exam Preparation and Classyfi. Posts name Hamna Nadeem/Hamna Apps and reuse the same support contact. Feed publication/update fields show the Notebook legal posts were updated on 5 November 2026; current wording is not assumed to be unchanged since June. Shared blog documents establish a published support trail, not a registered legal entity or a second Apple account. Fresh HTTP 200.

E20 / A related policy still contains author-editing notes

Image Search For Safari privacy policy on the same blog contains a note to confirm that the support inbox carried over from another policy is correct, and a governing-jurisdiction note requiring review before publication. E32 / Claimed screenshot link was not corroborated

The supplied PDF flags two identical screenshots. Fresh exact comparison covered all 17 Hamna promotions (6 iPhone, 6 iPad, 5 Mac) against all 8 Miten promotions: no identical source-file SHA-256 or decoded RGBA image hashes. Visual review also shows different marketing sets. Resized/cropped or historical reuse is not ruled out; this result does not establish common code or ownership.

E33 / Supplied Wayback replay returned a rate limit

The source's same-day US archive URL returned HTTP 429. Successful index queries returned empty lists; other current/canonical/legacy variants timed out or failed. Hey! This is a big update — here's what's new:

Generate in any language — notes, quizzes, flashcards and transcripts now come out in whichever language you choose.

Quiz got better — interactive mode with instant answer feedback, plus a score screen at the end so you know exactly how you did.

Flashcards flip in stunning 3D — tap any card to reveal the answer with a beautiful real card rotation.

Projects & Collections — organise your history into folders and keep every subject in its own space.

Star any note — pin your favourites to the top of History so they're always easy to find.

Brand new onboarding — first-time users get a guided intro to everything NoteMind can do.

Export in one tap — save any note as a PDF, Word (.docx) or Markdown file instantly.

Bug fixes and performance improvements.

10. Tracking & Advertising

- We do not track you across apps or websites.
- We do not serve personalized ads.
- We do not use cookies or device fingerprinting.

If third-party ad networks are integrated, any identifiers collected comply with Apple's ATT framework and require your permission.

11. Governing Law & Dispute Resolution

This Privacy Policy is governed by and construed in accordance with applicable data protection and privacy laws of your country of residence, including but not limited to:

- European Union users: The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR — EU 2016/679) and applicable national implementations.
- California, USA users: The California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA) and California Privacy Rights Act (CPRA).
- UK users: The UK GDPR and the Data Protection Act 2018.
- All other users: The applicable privacy and data protection laws of your country or region of residence.

In the event of any dispute arising from or relating to this Privacy Policy or your use of the App, we encourage you to first contact us directly at support.hamna@gmail.com so we can attempt to resolve the matter informally. We aim to respond within 5 business days.

If a dispute cannot be resolved informally, it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the courts or regulatory authorities of your country of residence, in accordance with locally applicable law.

Nothing in this Privacy Policy limits your rights to file a complaint with your local data protection authority (e.g., the ICO in the UK, or a supervisory authority under GDPR in the EU).
